The Atlanta camp has appointed a committee to confer with a committee of the Richmond veterans as to the place of meeting next year. The members of the committee from Richmond are James T. Gray, George L. Christian, J. Taylor Effyson, John B. Cary, and Peyton Wise. It now looks as if Richmond would have

The wet and dripping and myriad DAUGHTER OF THE CONFEDERACY last night, was overwhelmed with visiters this morning, who crowded around him to shake the band of him who led them in many a stormy conflict.

Nine o'clock was the hour at which the convention was to be opened, but it was nearer II when President Cleveland, of the United Confederate Veteram? Relief Association, opened the meeting. The vast auditorium, holding 7,000 people, was crowded to its utmost capacity. The state, as they receiled from the hige platform, rose in amphitheatric style, the delegates from each State having their locality designated by a banner. Around three sides of the building ran a spachous balcony. The entire interior was olaborately decorated with flags and bunting, and helpind the stage four large American flags were draped around the effigy of an eagle, painted in brilliant colors, while on each side were hung the Confederate colors in half rosette. Along the edge of the platform was a row of paimettoes, relieving the background as it appeared from the audience.

PRAYER BY CHAPLAIN JONES.
At about 10:50 o'clock General John B.
Gordon mounted the platform. He was looking the picture of health, and bowed a graceful acknowledgment as the crowd greeted him with long and continued applause. President Cleveland introduced Chaplain-General Jones, who opened the meeting with prayer. He called upon the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; the God of Jefferson Davis, to be with the veterans at this reunion; to be with them in their deliberations; to biess every section of our common country; to bless the President Cleveland followed in a brief address. Under the conquered flag, he said, they had come together to honor the cause for which it waved. They had met to-day under the blessings of peace, in cheerful acceptance of their heritage of defeat, without criticism. (Applause.) He welcomed the delegates to the hearts and homes of Texas, the realization of their brightest dreams.

In chosing, he presented Governor Charles Culberson, who said that the Charles Cuberson, who said that the American Colonies, fieeing from the mul-tiplied wrongs of monarchy, planted themselves in a wilderness, where the essential principle of their economy was local self-government. Under this system grew up the institution of slavery. This was recognized by a majority at the North and a minority of the South, proper laws eing made for the safety of slaves. The increase of siaves in the South made them prohiable. Growing manufactures gave them employment, and they were woven into the warp and woof of our social system. The North at tals time exhibited a quickened conscience as to the wrongs of slave-holding, and when disunlon was threatened invading armies were sent to coerce sovereign and independent States to remain in the Union. The challenge being made, there was no choice for the States but acceptance. (Applause.)

He paid a high tribute to the "great leader, whose daughter honors us with her presence to-day (applause), and culogized the slory of the southern cause. It was the proudest act of his official life to welcome the veterans of that cause.

At the conclusion of the Governor's ech the band played "The Bonnie be Flag," and the crowd burst forth layer Browne then arose and ex-mend to-day in Portsmouth simply because the "Green and Gray" outplayed the "Bluebirds" in the field and made as many hits. Up to the ninth inning, however, it was anybody's game, and Jake Wells were a confident smile on his face, but when the locals had piled up fou runs to their credit in their half his smile turned to a look of dismay.

There was a large crowd present, and notwithstanding the recent heavy rains the grounds were in fairly good condition, so that the only possible excuse the visitors can have for their defeat is the umpire. Truth compels the statement at times, but his decisions would not have affected the result. Richmond deeated herself by making six costly errors.

THE PITCHERS. Leach and Flynn were the opposing pitchers, and although the latter struck out twice as many men, the former was more effective-in fact, pitched the better stood 1 to 1, when Portsmouth went in and made four runs on two bases on tcok almost all the ginger and snap out of the visitors, which they never re gained until the last inning. The score appeared at one time as if they would win only by a garrisonian finish. In Brady, who is a hard loser, a case of heart-disease. Leach had let down, and two hits, a fielder's choice, and Thurston's wild throw let in two runs. But that was the best they could do, and this dld not win. The following is the score: PORTSMOUTH.

CHRISTIAN Encyclical Letter on the Subject from Pope Leo.

PLEA FOR SPECIAL PRAYERS.

To Be Offered During the Nine Days Preceding the Penst of Pentecost and the Eight Days Following It-

Sacred Indulgences.

WASHINGTON, May 22-Following is a translation, given out to-night by the Apostolic Legation here, of an encyclical letter from the Pope. The encyclical is addressed to the heads of the Catholic Church throughout the world, and is a plea for universal prayers looking to the unity of Christendom, to be offered before and on Pentecost: "Most worthy, certainly, of the watchful love of a mother is the prayer which the Church never ceases to offer to God that wherever Christian people exist there should be one faith of mind and holiness of action. In like manner we, who, as we represent the person of the Divine Pastor in the world, also strive to out His intention, have never failed to ourish among Catholics that desire for union; and even now are we more strenuunion; and even now are we more strenuously urging on those whom the Church for so long a time and with so great earnestness has been calling back to her fold. The source whence we are especially to expect assistance for the designs and offerings of ours is not hard to discern, and grows more evident day by day. It is none other than the 'Father of Mercles' whom we rightly invoke, and to whom it pertains to illumine our minds and graciously to turn our wills to the way of salvation. "Catholics surely cannot fall to see how to the way of salvation.

"Catholics surely cannot fail to see how grave and important is the work we have undertaken. On it depends the eternal salvation of many, together with the spread of divine honor and the glory of the Christian name. Which things, if they sincerely and plously consider, they will surely feel in their souls a stronger burning of that divine charity which, with God's grace, shrinks from no labor and leaves untried no means for the good of leaves untried no means for the good of their brethren. And so it will happen that they will eagerly, as we so ardently de-sire, not only add to our confidence in a happy result, but will give us all the as-sistance they can, especially that which humble and holy prayer can obtain from Good.

Wonderful way strengthened and perwonderful way streng sons of God by adoption, was a wonderful way strengthened and perfected. For, by the multiform grace of the Spirit, there come to them in perpetual bounty divine light and fervor, petual bounty divine light and fervor, health and strength, solace and rest—the desire of seeking all good, and a fruitfulness in holy works.

"Finally, the name Holy Spirit so acts by His power in the Church, that, as Christ is the head of this mystic body, the Holy Spirit may aptily be termed its heart, for, as St. Thomas says: The heart has a certain hidden influence, and therefore, the Holy Spirit is compared and unites the Church."

"Since, then, the Holy Spirit is, above all things, charity, and to Him especially are attributed the works of love, it is greatly to be hoped that through Him the spirit of error and wickedness being put down, greater and stronger harmony and union of mind will prevail as they go along the Church, which, according to the admonition of the Apostle, should do nothing in strife; should think the same things, and, united, should have the same charity. And so, perfecting our joy, may they form one strong and flourishing body, not in name only, but in fact.

Sketch of the Career of the Famous Composer. VIENNA, May 22.-Franz Von Suppe the composer, died at his home, near this city, yesterday; 75 years of age. Francesco Ezechiele Ermenegildo Cavalliere Suppe Demeill was born in Spaiato, Dalmatia, in 1820. He early exlearned the flute, at 13 harmony, and at musical indulgence not practical, and sen him to the University of Padau. But the fetter died shortly afterwards, and the widow, with her son, moved to Vienna. Here Franz taught Italian and practiced Wicow, with her son, moved to varian. Here Franz taught Italian and practiced medicine a short time, and then studied music under Seyfried, obtaining a gratuitous post as conductor in the Josephstedt Theatre. This was followed by engagements in Pressburg and Baden, and then in the theatres Au-der-Wein, Qual, and Leopoidstadt, in Vienna.

In 1844 he began composing, and three years later brought out "The Country Girl," which met with mild success. Ten years later "Paragraph 3" extended his fame in Germany, and from that time a steady string of pieces flowed from his pen. His works were computed by Wurzbach to have reached the remarkable number of 165 farces, comedictes, and vaudevilles, two grand operas, and a mass and a requiem. The two comic operas which brought him most fame were "Fatinitza" and "Boccaccio," the latter having made a tour of the world. His overture to "Ditcher und Bauer," arranged for fifty-nine different combinations of instruments, also won Bauer," arranged for fifty-nine different combinations of instruments, also won him much popularity. Among others of his best productions are "Light Cavairy" and "The Beautiful Galatea." "Fathis'se" and "Boccaccio" brought him a fortune, and he retired to a spiendid estate in the neighborhood of Vienna.

Besides his specialty in operatic music of the lighter character, Suppe had also a fair record as a writer of overture, symphony, and quartets for stringed instruments. But it was mainly as a writer of operatta that he laid chaim to distinction. The chief secret of Suppe's musical success lay in a charming simplicity and genial warmth in his meiodies. The "Oh, du Mein Oesterreich" is claimed, after the imperial hymn, to be the most popular of airs with the Austrian populace. Suppe was frequently called the Austrian Offenbach, but, although the two artists showed many points of similarity, they cannot be treated upon the same plane. The nature many points of similarity, they cannot be treated upon the same plane. The nature of Offenbach was to the last extreme antirical. The composer of "Orpheus" and "La Belle Helene" hesitated at nothing when the brilliancy of his wit was called into play. Suppe, on the other hand, delighted in painting the scenes of domestic life, free from all touch of causticism. The works of Offenbach eech in every note the influence of Parisian chic and life of the Boulevard, and lose their keenest point and best flavor when given outside the French capital. Suppe was essentially a German, especially an Austrian, and was best appreciated in Vienna.

FATHER AGAINST SON.

Lords Queensberry and Douglas of Hawlek Have a Scrap.

LONDON, May 22.-Yesterday's report that the Marquis of Queensberry and his son, Lord Alfred Douglas, had engaged in a fight in Piccadilly, was erroneous in respect of the younger participant in the affray. It was the Marquis's elder son, Lord Douglas of Hawlek, who was his antagonist. Both were arraigned in the Marlborough-Street Police Court this morning, and placed in the dock together to answer a charge of disorderly conduct in fighting on the street. The Marquis said his son was the aggressor, having first assaulted him, and he only struck back in self-defence. Lord Douglas of Hawlek said he merely desired his father's assurance that he would cease writing letters to his (Hawlek's) wife, reviling her husband. His aim in meeting his father was to stop these communications. in the affray. It was the Marquis's elder

The Defendant Pale and Haggard-Not Taken to Jall. LONDON, May 22 .- The second trial of Stewart Hedlam, his other bondsman, Lord Douglas of Hawick, being engaged in the Mariborough-Street Police Court, defending himself against a charge of disorderly conduct. Wilde looked pale and haggard as he entered the dock, evidently being greatly affected by the result of the trial of Taylor yesterday.

Sir Frank Lockwood, Q. C., M. P., conducted the prosecution. The alleged offences charged against Wilde, he said in his opening address, occurred between February, 1932, and October, 1803. He laid special stress upon the charge in which Wilde was involved with Shelley. Alfred Wood and Charles Parker were called to the stand and repeated the testimony previously given by them, after which the court adjourned.

"We are on the eve of a tremendous upheaval." he said, "and it is the duty of every man to get in line for the political hattle, to define his views, and to announce on which side he has arrayed himself. Efforts are being made to make this a sectional question. God forbid that we shall ever again have sectional antagonisms on issues affecting the entire country. As a southerner, I repudiate tagonisms on issues affecting the entire country. As a southerner, I repudiate the idea that this is a question of the great East against the South. It is not a sectional issue, but one which must be settled by appeals, not to passion or prejudice, but to reason—one affecting the happiness of the people. It must be settled, and honorably settled."

Superintendent of the Gas-Works. (Communicated.)

To the Honorable Members of the Board

To the Honorable Members of the Board of Aldermen and the Common Council: Gentlemen,—in the selection of a worthy successor to the late William C. Adams deep and earnest consideration should be given, whether the applicant possesses that practical knowledge, experience, and executive ability so absolutely necessary in the present critical financial condition of our fair city.

Seventeen consecutive years, one of Richmond's oldest members of her councils; for years a most efficient chairman of the Committee on Light; a thorough student of the make and output of gas; the inspiring genius that saved our Gas—Works to the people; honest earnest, capable—his selection to the office would give universal satisfaction. Richmond's best property would find in him its best guardian; labor a strict head, but generous friend; the consumer ever a watchful and just protects. In a word, no better, no worther selection could be made for this most important position of the Superintendent of the Gas-Works than our useful and honored fellow-citizen—John M. Higgins.
